A substitute teacher in New York State does not require teacher certification. You may be employed in any capacity for any length of time, in any number of school districts. However, if you are employed on a long-term basis, (e.g., more than 90 days in one school district per school year), then you must be working toward certification in that specific field or area.

A Teacher Assistant in New York State offers instructional services under the supervision of a licensed teacher. Qualified applicants must have the following 1) high school diploma or a general equivalent, 2) proficiency in reading, writing and speaking the English language, 3) legal documented authorization to work in U.S. and 4) clear record by State and Federal authorities as well as a clear employment record from previous employers.

Participants in this workshop will receive instruction on how to read a teacher's handbook, follow district policies and how to work with students with disabilities. Additionally, participants will receive the training required of all instructional staff for certification purposes: Child Abuse Awareness, School Violence and the Dignity for All Students Act (DASA) workshops.

Participants who wish to continue on to become certified as a Teacher Assistant must take the Assessment of Teacher Assistant Skills Test and apply to the New York State Education Department for their license. Our NYSED Certification Officer will walk you through the steps once training is completed.
